Second Symphony of Sibelius Sounds Better Than Three Years Ago.

The concert of the Symphony Society at eolian Hall yesterday afternoon had that find of interest so often found in the entertainments of the organization, namely, departure from the beaten path. The ymphony of the afternoon was the second of Sibelius, which has not been heard nce the Boston Orchestra played it in January, 1911. The composition is one which ought to be presented oftener. It is not as important perhaps as some the same musician's other productions, but it should not be permitted to rest in peace while every page of rubbish turned out by the presses of St. Petersburg and odigality of tone in some of the fortes.

There was another solo performed, to last named. So abode these three, Alda, t. Katherine Goodson, the English anlst, who with rare judgment revived to say which was the greatest.

So far as the printed records show no one has played it since that time until yesterday. It is a good concerto and ought to be heard oftener. The first and second movenents are especially rich in good thematic material and brilliantly effective develop-ment for the solo instrument. If the matof the finale is not quite so strong certo as a whole is one to which any Mich any good planist can make a suc-Miss Goodson aroused her hearers to

The play has been running for two seasons in Berlin and Vienna and requires an acting and singing chorus in addition to a cast of principals of dramatic and musical ability. After its Chicago engagement the piece will be seen in Boston and will come to the Shubert Theatre in New York the first of next season. Julius Steger has been engaged for one of the leading roles.

REJOINDER BY MR. KLAW.

Explains Remarks to Which "The Sun" Took Exception. Referring to the editorial in Friday's

SUN Marc Klaw said to a SUN reporter yesterday:

"I don't think The SUN is quite logical in its construction of my remarks. I said that 'insulting paragraphs and unnecessarily harsh ridicule' took the heart out of the artists. That does not mean that criticism must be gentle, but I have read paragraphs and reviews this season in the papers in New York that were absolutely insulting to the dramatist and actor; and I claim that that is not fair or honest criticism. The man who told the lady out West that she had no talent, if he was a man who spoke with auif he was a man who spoke with au-thority, was guilty of no crime, whether she had talent or not; but he would have had no right to say that her hands were like clubs, her arms like piana legs and her face like a mud pie. I have seen things almost as personal as that written in New York critiques. "Another thing: The article which is quoted in Friday's Sun was part of something I said upon uselessness of dra-matic criticism. I claimed that it was obsolete in twentieth century journalism, and that the only effect it had was to hurt these people. Constructive criti-cism would be welcome, but it is found so rarely nowadays that it is not worth consideration in the general summing up."

Another Combination in Cast.

Puccini's "La Boheme" has to be per Moscow is thrust into our faces. This sibelius symphony is dark, sombre, tragic in parts, but it is well made and has character. It was admirably presented yesterday, albeit there was too much odigality of tone in some of the fortes.

Something which Granville Bantock, the Alda was the Mimi. She had sung the role English composer, called a "Sapphic learlier in the season, but with Giovanni Martinelli as Rodolfo.
